SHOW HIGHLIGHTS : SCORE – POWERING SUSTAINABLE SARAWAK

IEW 2020 will be the key platform to showcase the growth and development of the Sarawak Corridor of Renewable Energy (SCORE). The SCORE initiative has generated huge investments in mega projects and with the continued development of its infrastructure include the Samalaju Port is expected to attract more local and foreign high value added investments.

PAN BORNEO HIGHWAY: EFFICIENT CONNECTIONS

The Pan Borneo Highway development is one of the key in bringing transformation throughout Sarawak. IEW 2020 will be featuring the development of this project and the benefits for Sarawakians.

THE ENERGY SECTOR IN SARAWAK A MARKET OVERVIEW

Sarawak, with its abundant primary resources, can be developed for power generation, e.g. oil, gas, and coal. Hydropower represents the largest indigenous renewable energy resource in Malaysia, with a technically exploitable potential of 123,000 GWh per annum, of which 70% lies in Sarawak's interior.

Adding to the 2,400 megawatts (MW) capacity of Bakun hydroelectric project worth RM21 billion, owned by the Malaysian Government, and the 944 MW from the Murum, the state will have a potential of close to 7,400 MW by 2025.

SEB is set to become a major power player if Sarawak can transmit electricity to neighbours like Indonesia, Singapore and West Malaysia.

By the year 2050, it is estimated that renewable energy will make up 50% of energy consumption.

OIL AND GAS SECTOR IN SARAWAK - A MARKET OVERVIEW

Malaysia held 75 trillion cubic feet (Tcf) of proven natural gas reserves as of January 2007, and much of the country's natural gas production comes from Eastern Malaysia, especially offshore Sarawak.

Malaysia has three LNG processing plants, all located in a massive complex at Bintulu (East Malaysia) and supplied by the onshore natural gas fields at Sarawak.

The Bintulu facility is the largest LNG complex in the world, with a total liquefaction capacity of 22.7 MMt (1.1 Tcf) per year. Petronas holds majority equity stakes in all three LNG plants at Bintulu: Malaysia LNG Sdn Bhd (MLNG), MLNG Dua, and MLNG Tiga.

E&P activities in Malaysia continue to focus in offshore areas, especially in deepwater blocks. There a number of on-going PSC projects set to expand natural gas production in Malaysia.
